

AI-Visibility Audit Outreach

Generalized for external sharing. Original product name, sender identity, and specific report mechanics have been abstracted.

CONTEXT

This email follows an in-person meeting at a startup accelerator event. It's the first outreach after that conversation, built around a complimentary audit run on the prospect's own website, showing them a real, specific gap rather than opening with a generic pitch.

SUBJECT: Your visibility report is ready

Hi [First Name],

Great connecting at the event today. I ran a complimentary AI-visibility audit on [company.com] before sending this. It's attached, and it shows exactly where your business is invisible to AI search right now.

[Pages found] AI-invisible pages | [Engines checked] AI engines checked | [Count] competitors showing up instead

Most businesses don't know they have this gap: pages that rank on Google and drive real traffic but vanish completely when someone asks an AI assistant for a recommendation in their space.

This report shows exactly which pages on your site are invisible to AI search, which competitors are showing up in your place, and what that's likely costing you in pipeline. I ran it for you so you can see the gap without lifting a finger.

Start with the number at the top. That's how many invisible pages we found. The highlighted pages are your highest-priority fixes.

Happy to walk you through exactly what to do about it in 30 minutes.

Looking forward to the conversation.

WHAT THIS DEMONSTRATES

- Personalized, evidence-led outreach rather than a generic cold pitch, anchored in a real in-person touchpoint.
- A clear, ownable metaphor (an audit gap given a concrete name) that does explanatory work instead of relying on category jargon.
- A low-friction, specific ask (a 30-minute walkthrough) rather than an open-ended "let's connect" close.
- Copy built around a personalized data asset (the audit itself) as the value delivered before any pitch is made.
